Hiring of extra teacher concerns board

Members want to see staff-to-student ratios to confirm needs

By LEE PULASKI City Editor

Hiring staff and accepting resignations and retirements are usually handled in the Shawano School Board's consent agenda, where multiple items are approved in one motion. At the July 27 meeting, however, board members noticed an additional fourth grade teacher being hired and wanted some answers.

Until now, there were six fourth grade teachers at Olga Brener Intermediate School, in compliance with directives set by the board earlier this year that grades 4-12 would have classroom sizes ranging from 25-30 students. There are currently 157 students going into fourth grade, which puts the average classroom size at 26 students with the six teachers.

Adding a seventh teacher puts the ratio at 22 or 23 students per teacher, below the range. The request came after the board voted in February to cut the 2026-27 district budget by $1.77 million, most of that coming from cutting teaching positions.

Board member Tim Renard questioned where the money came from to add a seventh teaching position, considering the cuts.

"It has not been discussed in any way, shape or form that I was aware of, so I'm looking for a walk through this to understand," Renard said.

Business services director Bryan Kadlec said the rationale for the additional teacher was due to the numbers, noting that the third grade class from the past school year was particularly large.

"It was just by nature of that group going through that particular cycle," Kadlec said.

Board President Christine McKinnies said that, while she would like to see the district have more teachers, the district had to cut expenses, and the majority of the budget is covering employee salaries and benefits.

Vote on $29M borrowing looming

Would be first of three phases needed to build new courthouse

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Despite all the talk about a new courthouse in Shawano County, until supervisors actually vote to borrow funds, there are no guarantees the project will happen.

That day is coming soon. Carol Wirth, president and owner of Wisconsin Public Finance Professionals LLC, outlined the steps to take over the next months that will kick off the estimated $121 million building project.

She reminded supervisors the borrowing will take place in three phases over three years, the first phase being $29 million.

Each borrowing requires an inquiry with Moody Investor Service for a bond rating.

"You currently have a bond rating from Moody's of a(n) AA2, a very high quality rating," she said.

At the Aug. 26 meeting, she will provide a report that shows current market interest rates, based on other Wisconsin municipal bond sales.

"I will be able to give you those type of results and apply them to your $29 million issue," she said.

Supervisors will be asked to approve a resolution that offers a heads up to lenders that the county intends enter the bond market.

Bids for foundation work will be let in August and be due in September.

"The bids will come in on Sept. 23," Wirth said. "That's also the date of the board meeting."

That is the meeting at which the board will be asked to award a bid. They will also be advised on how the lending information compares to estimates given in the spring.

"After that, we have the closing, which is Oct. 14," Wirth said. "At that time, all $29 million is wired into the county."

The funds must go into a segregated account and can never be moved into the county's general operating account.

"That money can be invested, and the investment earnings stays in the project account," she said.

All money must be spent within two years of it being borrowed, and there are spending benchmarks at each six-month interval.

She said recent bond sales have been around 4% for 20 years. They had been down to 3.75% around the beginning of the year.

On the front side of the project, Kurt Berner, of The Samuels Group, said local officials continue to work with Venture Architects on the interior plans of the courthouse, jail housing pod and jail auxiliary services.

"The floor plan, development of the project is progressing on track," he said. "We're still shooting to have a bid pack 1 that will go out sometime in August. Our goal is to do that bid pack 1, which will be an early bid pack, putting foundations in, then with the balance in November."

Venture Architects has renderings of the courthouse interior, including furnishings and color schemes.

There will be an officer station at the front door for screening of visitors. The new county board room will be adjacent to that area.

Behind the screening station will be a hallway with government offices branching out from it.

"The way that those departments are configured is that there will be the name for the department; you'll be able to come into that waiting room, and then for security purposes, if they want to speak with that individual from that department, they can go into an adjacent conference room," Berner said.

Office staff can still take visitors back to their offices, if they choose to do so.

The lobby will also feature elevators and a public stairway to the second floor courtrooms and court-related offices.

Voters head to the polls Aug. 11

Primary election to set stage for November

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Voters will head to the polls Aug. 11 to cast their ballots in a primary election that will set the stage for November's general election, which includes the race for Wisconsin's next governor.

Four Democratic candidates will compete to succeed Gov. Tony Evers as the party's nominee. They are former Department of Administration Secretary Joel Brennan, Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley, Madison state Rep. Francesca Hong and Madison state Sen. Kelda Roys.

"I, based on social media and the news, honestly believe the only race that may drive voter turnout up will be the Democratic Party race for governor," Shawano County Clerk Raymond Rigsby said. "In 2022, the last race for governor, there was a statewide turnout of only 22% with Shawano County having a 40% turnout."

Oconto County Clerk Kim Pytleski cited similar numbers.

"Voter turnout for the August 2022 primary was 30%, and turnout in 2018 was 29%. Those were both gubernatorial race years," she said. "In comparison, turnout for the presidential primaries were 20% in 2020 and 32% in 2024. Based on those statistics and the number of ballot candidates, I anticipate a similar turnout to August 2022 – 30% countywide – give or take."

The size of the Democratic gubernatorial field, which held at seven major candidates for months, shifted rapidly in July that included both the exit of Lt. Gov. Sara Rodriguez from the race after she revealed problems with her campaign finance reports and the reentry of Crowley, who secured an endorsement from Evers.

Then, on July 30, former Lt. Gov. Mandela Barnes dropped out of the race. He cited to a lack of a viable path to the nomination amid surging poll numbers for Hong, coupled with an unfolding media investigation into past misconduct allegations.

Barnes, Rodriguez and Missy Hughes are still on the ballot, as they withdrew too late to have their names removed.

On the Republican side, Rep. Tom Tiffany is the presumptive nominee, although he faces token opposition from Andy Manske.

The lieutenant governor's race features Republicans David Varnam and Will Martin.

Republican secretary of state candidates are Jay Schroeder, Brayden Myer, Nate Pollnow and Cindy Werner.

Democrats competing to be the state treasurer nominee are Yee Leng Xiong and Dylan Helmenstine.

For Congress, it's Mark Scheffler, Rick Crosson and Katrina deVillie competing on the Democratic side.

"We had a countywide turnout of 36% in the spring, and I planned for a county average 50% turnout for the partisan primary," Rigsby said. "Some municipal clerks asked for a higher percentage of ballots. I will note that Shawano County has certain municipalities that turnout is higher than the average. Couple to note are towns of Bartleme, Green Valley, Hutchins and Seneca and villages of Eland and Cecil."

Several candidates are unopposed for their party's nomination, including those at the county level and state legislative races.

Pytleski reminded voters to have their voting plan made in advance of entering the polling place; if they need additional information, they can review the notices and sample ballots available at each polling location.

Questions or concerns can be directed to the chief election inspector at each polling location or by calling the county clerk's office at 920-834-6800 on election day.

"Voters who have not mailed back their absentee ballots to the clerk's office as of (Aug. 7) should make arrangements to deliver their ballots to the clerk or polling location by 8 p.m. on election day," Pytleski said. "Ballots must be received by 8 p.m. to be counted."

Wisconsin has an open primary system, so residents don't need to be registered with a political party to vote a certain way. However, they can only vote within one party. If you're choosing a Republican congressional candidate, for example, you can't select a Democrat anywhere else on your ballot.

All voting places open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Ingold pleads not guilty on threats

Attorney argues that statements of harm are protected speech

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Michael Ingold was acquitted months ago on a first-degree homicide charge, but it's his own words leading up to that trial that are keeping him in jail and the court system.

Portage County Judge Louis Molepske Jr. ruled that there's enough probable cause following a preliminary hearing to bind Ingold, 61, over for trial in the latest case where there are 10 charges against him for threatening the two people from the district attorney's office who prosecuted the homicide trial and the two detectives who investigated the case.

ruling, Ingold pleaded not guilty to all charges, which include eight counts of battery or threat to prosecutors or law enforcement officers and two counts of threatening to cause bodily harm to individuals in the court system. Each of the charges carry a maximum of six years and fines of $10,000.

Winnebago County District Attorney Eric Sparr, who took on the case because the alleged threats were levied against representatives of the Shawano-Menominee County District Attorney's Office, argued that while the threats were not made directly to the victims, it is not a requirement in threatening cases. Having a number of jail calls on record along with the interview of a jail officer who claimed Ingold made a threat was enough to bring forth the charges.

"I think there's an argument that one statement alone wouldn't be a threat, but we have the context of all of the other phone calls and statements that were made," Sparr said.

Defense attorney Christopher Restemayer argued that the jail calls and off-hand remarks do not meet the true threat analysis and that standards in a criminal trial are tighter.

"Much of my client's comments were, 'I would like this to happen,' or 'I would like to do this,'" Restemayer said. "That does not meet the threshold of a true threat."

Restemayer further argued that speech cannot be restricted or punished under the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. He painted Ingold's statements as "wishful thinking" of someone who had sitting in jail for two or three years.

"Violence must be threatened, not merely predicted, hoped or endorsed," Restemayer said.

"To be a true threat, it cannot be merely venting or frustration or anger, which is what we have here. As despicable as the state might think his speech is, it is still protected."

Shawano County Sheriff's Detective Chris Gamm, who is also one of the victims in the current case, testified that another inmate at the Shawano County Jail informed him about Ingold making threats, which prompted Gamm to review some of the recordings made by Turnkey, the provider for the jail's phone services. From January through December 2025, there were a number of calls where Ingold allegedly said he wanted harm or death to come to the people involved in prosecuting the murder trial.

Gamm said there was a call on Jan. 28 where Ingold said he wanted the detective hung. Another call in March had Ingold saying he was "going to do something terrible." In April, Ingold allegedly said he would torture his victims, including beating them with a baseball bat. Other threats were made in a July phone call and another time to a jail officer after returning from a court hearing, according to Gamm.

Gamm also said that the jail inmate he interviewed claimed that Ingold was demonstrating in the jail's dayroom what he intended to do to the detectives and prosecutors, putting his fingers in the form of a gun.

In the recordings, according to Gamm, the people Ingold talked to warned that he shouldn't be making such statements because they could be taken seriously by law enforcement. Ingold's alleged response was "Let them take them seriously."

Ingold's behavior hasn't been limited to phone calls and chats in the jail, according to Gamm.

"He has a long history of making disparaging comments to myself, v(ictim) two and the other detective during the court hearings," he said.

Molepske, in his ruling, said he didn't know if Ingold was aware that phone calls in the jail are recorded, but the claim that Ingold stated he didn't care who heard his threats was enough to provide the burden of proof to move forward with a trial.

Ingold has now been in the Shawano County Jail for four years, currently being held on a $10,000 cash bond. A closed pre-trial conference for the attorneys is planned for Aug. 24, and a scheduling conference is planned for 8:30 a.m. Oct. 26 in the County Board Room at the Shawano County Courthouse.

CLARIFICATION

An article in the July 31 issue inadvertently gave the wrong impression of Shawano County Board Chairman Tom Kautza regarding County Clerk Raymond Rigsby.

At the July 22 meeting of the county board, Kautza intended to convey that he wasn't in favor of a candidate seeking the appointment to replace Rigsby on the county board when Rigsby was named county clerk.

Kautza said that candidate had a set of predetermined conditions. Days later, Kautza stressed later he was talking about the candidate, not Rigsby, and that he fully supported Rigsby being named county clerk.

Kadlec sharing business services elsewhere

Board OKs deal with other school district

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Shawano School District business operations director Bryan Kadlec has also been providing business services to the Beecher-Dunbar-Pembine School District over the past year, and the Shawano School Board has approved a deal allowing him to continue to do so.

Kadlec was contracted last year to provide up to 26 days of service, or 10% of the year, to the other school district, but the new deal allows up to 15 days over the next 12 months. The deal is expected to bring anywhere from $9,500 to $10,500 in revenue to the Shawano School District.

"The reality is the district doesn't need as much time, so overall that's a good thing," Kadlec said. "Last year, when we went through this, the fact is it's a win-win for our school district, and it continues to be."

School board members expressed concern about whether Kadlec's attention was fully focused on local school business operations. Board member Frank Kugel asked where Kadlec's "base of operations" is, to which Kadlec said that he spends one or two days each week in the district office but works remotely the rest of the time.

That news didn't sit well with board member Bobbi Lemerond, who expressed concern about whether it was helping or hurting the district having Kadlec on-site for only part of the time.

"Considering you're also managing human resources and other areas, my concern is that if you're going to be splitting services with another district, and you're already splitting time on-site, are all of those people going to get the time that they require when they need you?" Lemerond said.

Kadlec said the remote work hasn't caused an issue in the three years he has worked in Shawano.

Board member Tim Renard said that was fine when Kadlec was just handling the finance side of things, but because his workload has increased to oversee other departments, it brings into question whether the director should be working in-person in the district.

"I want you focused on the Shawano School District," Renard said. "You're taking on a new role, something that you've not done before."

Kadlec said he'd previously worked in other school districts where he was overseeing both finance and human resources.

Board President Christine McKinnies disagreed with the concerns about where Kadlec was working. She noted that she usually prefers staff to be working at the schools, but she said the remote work has been going on the last three years, with the board never asking about the arrangements.

"In your role, it makes the most sense for finances and all that," McKinnies said. "A phone call or an email can get questions answered. I don't have to have you in-person to deal with a student who is misbehaving."

Kadlec said he has a contract with Shawano for 260 days of work, minus any vacation or personal time. Last year, he worked for 280 days, 26 of them for the Beecher-Dunbar-Pembine School District.

"If there's any time between Shawano or Pembine, Shawano takes priority No. 1, and that's not been questioned," Kadlec said.

Renard said he still believes district employees should be focused solely on Shawano schools, even though there is money coming to the district for Kadlec's services.

"Nine thousand dollars is not a lot of money," Renard said.

Board member Jeana Winslow questioned the wisdom in keeping Kadlec strictly for the Shawano School District, especially with budgets getting tighter and candidate pools shrinking.

"We can't afford a Bryan 100% of the time. Neither can Pembine or Gresham or Marion or all the other school districts," Winslow said. "We have to start getting creative, even with teachers down the road."

Traffic study shows few changes for Main St. needed

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Shawano Field Committee received an update July 28 on a traffic study done by Shawano County in the area where a new courthouse is supposed to be built in a few years.

Mike Mahloch, public works director, told the committee that the city had requested a traffic study when it learned of the county's plans to replace the existing courthouse, which has been in place since the 1950s. The reason this was done is because portions of Second, Third and Washington streets are being removed, which has the side effect of changing traffic patterns in the area.

"We wanted to know how this new courthouse was going to affect traffic on Main Street," Mahloch said. "We know they're going to be adding another judge, so there's (going to be) another court with the potential of three courts running at the same time and increasing traffic in that area."

Entrances are planned with the main one being off Main Street, directly across from North Sawyer Street, along with access via Fourth Street and the northwest corner from Second Street.

The report recommended no modifications under existing traffic. The only recommendation for when traffic reached its maximum capability was to reconstruct the west approach for North Main Street and West Third Street with a single shared-exit lane.

"They did account for the increase in the courts, the increase of potential staff," Mahloch said. "The Samuels Group did not see any negative impact to our Main Street, Fourth Street or the traffic around that new courthouse and jail."

When the courthouse plans were first introduced to the city, there were plans for only one entrance, according to City Administrator Eddie Sheppard, but that seemed like a problem waiting to happen.

"Not only are you funneling everything where everyone currently goes, now you're moving all that traffic onto Main Street. So they did put in another driveway," Sheppard said.

He added that the city and county are still meeting about the courthouse, including a meeting the day before the field committee met, and there are still some things that need to be ironed out to the city's satisfaction. Sheppard noted that Main Street is due to undergo construction in 2028, according to the Wisconsin Department of Transportation, so any changes in the lanes could be taken care of at that time.

"If there's any issue with traffic, and people are upset, it's going to be us that they're going to be wanting to talk to," Sheppard said.

Pulcifer man facing illegal hunting charges

DNR claims information on over 170 incidents in multiple counties

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

A Pulcifer man is facing charges related to illegal hunting and fishing on over 170 occasions in a 15-month period across five counties.

Dylan Jacob Wolff, 27, faces two charges of failing to obtain deer hunting approval, two counts of hunting deer during a closed season and two counts of hunting or fishing after revocation on a second incident within five years in Waupaca County. Those charges are misdemeanors with six months jail possible for each count, but Wolff also has two felony bail jumping charges because he was on probation when the incidents occurred, so those could keep him imprisoned for up to 3 1/2 years on each count.

Wolff's charges in Waupaca County stem from two incidents in the Town of Matteson on New Year's Eve 2025 and Jan. 8. GPS tracker data showed Wolff had frequented Zion Lutheran Cemetery 11 times during the time period, and a game warden with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources found evidence of tire tracks, footprints leading in and out of the woods in the cemetery area, a bottle of scent killer spray and multiple corn kernels.

Based on that information, the warden watched Wolff's vehicle leave his property Jan. 8 and go to the cemetery, according to the complaint. Several other wardens converged on the cemetery and approached the truck. Initially, Wolff claimed he was walking in the cemetery, even though it was almost dark and there was inclement weather.

Wolff initially claimed that he had not killed any deer during the 2025 season and had not been hunting, but after a .270 rifle was found in the back seat, he allegedly confessed to shooting a five-point buck Dec. 10 on the Cowyard Ripps public land near Pella, as well as a nine-point buck with a crossbow Oct. 23 on the Stockbridge-Munsee Reservation.

Wolff also allegedly confessed to turkey hunting in Shawano and Oconto counties, as well as shooting a buck with a crossbow during the holiday hunt and using his mother's deer tag to register it.

In all, the DNR believes that Wolff harvested 22 deer, 43 fish and two turkeys between Oct. 15, 2024, and Jan. 8, 2026. Later in the interview with DNR, it was revealed that Wolff had allegedly hunted 20 times with a crossbow, 10 times with the rifle, five times with a recurve bow and a muzzleloader three or four times during the 2025 hunting season.

The DNR also learned that Wolff had allegedly shot at a bobcat twice on Nov. 18, 2025, with a crossbow near United Cooperative in the Shawano Industrial Park as well as shooting a 10-point buck on Oct. 15, 2024, on private property in the Town of Belle Plaine.

No charges have been filed yet regarding the hunting incidents in Shawano or Oconto counties, but Wolff is also facing a charge of hunting or fishing after revocation in Forest County. He posted a $250 cash bond in that case.

Wolff is currently free on a $2,500 signature bond in Waupaca County. His next hearing is 1:30 p.m. Aug. 18 in Branch I of the Waupaca County Courthouse.

District's 2025-26 budget showing less red ink

Revenues down from approved budget; expenses even further

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Shawano School Board was pleased to hear that an anticipated $1 million budget deficit from the recently completed 2025-26 school year would actually only be $260,000, but it raised questions about why it was necessary to make $1.77 million in cuts for the 2026-27 school year.

In the budget approved in October 2025, the school district estimated that revenues for the district would be just above $33.6 million, while the expenses came in just shy of $34.6 million. The district reported at the time that there would be a deficit of $982,559, which would be covered by the district's ample fund balance, which stood at $10.3 million in February.

During a report at the July 27 board meeting, business services director

Bryan Kadlec reported that revenues received were about $150,000 less than originally projected. However, expenses so far are around $33.7 million, showing cuts or expenses that were less than anticipated. No specifics were presented on how the expenses were down.

Kadlec noted that the district is still closing out its books for the school year, and there are still bills and some revenue that have not landed in the district's coffers yet, he said.

"This is where we are as of today, but we are not done," Kadlec said. "We are not done, because we are continuing to accrue both revenue and expenses. We actually have some things coming in through the month of August, as well."

Kadlec noted that auditors are at the schools conducting the annual audit, so the district should have a more concrete picture of the district's expenses versus revenues when the audit report comes out.

"Overall, the story is that we have less revenue, but we also have less expenses," he said. "It's getting closer to reality."

Board member Bobbi Lemerond questioned why the district had to cut so much out of the upcoming budget, which is expected to be approved in late October after the district finds out how much state school aid is expected to go to Shawano and what the final enrollment numbers will be.

"All the cuts we made to level things off for next year, are we still projecting that big of a deficit for next year?" Lemerond said.

Kadlec said that the preliminary budget approved by the board in June was balanced. Lemerond noted that the current 2025-26 numbers show that budget is close to being balanced.

"I know $260 (thousand) is a lot, but it's close," she said. "We made a lot of cuts (for next year) that we may not need to have made."

Kadlec said the 2026-27 budget is not final until the aid and enrollment numbers are clear.

Newcap closure leaves Wisconsin counties scrambling to prevent more homelessness

By ASTRID CODE
Wisconsin Watch

It’s been more than three months since the anti-poverty nonprofit Newcap closed, laying off 90 employees and leaving more than 100 low-income households on the brink of homelessness. For Shawano County residents, that means losing their only year-round shelter.

At Safe Haven domestic abuse shelter in Shawano, Executive Director Mindy Lohff started getting dozens more crisis calls and observing more unsheltered people on the streets or in wooded areas.

“We’ve seen an increase in our shelter stays directly; we’ve seen an increase in the calls for looking for shelter,” Lohff said. “Unfortunately, if they aren’t actively fleeing domestic violence or sexual violence, they’re not eligible (to) stay here, and there’s nowhere for them to go in Shawano County.”

It’s not just that Lohff has nowhere to direct unsheltered people in Shawano. Newcap was a leading provider of homeless services for 10 counties — including Brown, Florence, Marinette, Menominee, Oconto, Shawano, Forest, Langlade, Oneida and Vilas. In 2025, Newcap had the capacity to provide nearly 250 beds across those counties, from emergency shelter to permanent housing.

These mostly rural counties have been rocked by Newcap’s abrupt closure March 31, which came amid financial challenges and leadership changes. Former CEO Cheryl Detrick was placed on leave shortly before the nonprofit closed its doors and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, revealing that it owed nearly $4 million to creditors.

The nonprofit’s closure reveals how the loss of a single agency can have a staggering effect, especially in rural areas where resources for the unhoused are already few and far between. As a federally designated regional leader — or Community Action Agency

Mindy Lohff, executive director of Safe Haven, a domestic abuse shelter in Shawano, stands in the donated food area. Since Newcap closed, Safe Haven is one of few places in Shawano County where people seeking shelter can find a place to stay for the night. However, it only serves survivors of domestic abuse or sexual assault. JOE TIMMERMAN | WISCONSIN WATCH

— Newcap held the keys to funding for many programs and can’t be easily replaced by a single organization.

Working together on shelter solutions

Shawano Area Matthew 25 is a seasonal overnight homeless shelter open from Oct. 15 to May 15. Newcap’s closure means Shawano County residents no longer have a homeless shelter to turn to during warmer months. Newcap also led Shawano’s homeless coalition, meaning it controlled state funding for SAM25. Executive Director Kendra Brusewitz said she’s still waiting on $12,000 in funds.

Over the summer, SAM25’s resource center is still open, providing food, showers, laundry and other assistance.

“We just continue to see an increase in the numbers coming through our resource center,” Brusewitz said. “Not having a place to refer people, families to in the area during the summer months is challenging.”

Without Newcap, nonprofit leaders realized there was no longer a way for Shawano County residents to access Coordinated Entry — a prioritization list that matches people with housing resources throughout the state based on their eligibility.

Safe Haven and SAM25 teamed up with Shawano Area United Way to form a coalition, educating local officials on housing needs and brainstorming solutions. Brusewitz and Lohff took charge of signing people up for Coordinated Entry.

“We’ve actually had clients getting pulled for the housing assistance, because they wanted to move to other counties, so that’s been great,” Lohff said.

They’ve also applied for grants to fund a housing coordinator for Shawano County and collaborated with Bonduel middle and high schools to make hygiene kits. The coalition’s efforts aren’t funded, nor are they part of anyone’s job description, but Shawano community leaders feel it’s necessary.

“A lot of us have lived here, grown up here, and we’re so passionate about it, so some of (the work) may be slightly out of the scope, but it’s so important,” Lohff said.

Support for survivors

Newcap’s grants allowed victims of domestic violence in Shawano and neighboring counties to obtain permanent housing, which is vital because Safe Haven is an emergency shelter, Lohff said. So far, no agency has been identified to permanently take on the grant.

“The financial assistance for them to be able to obtain the housing has vanished,” Lohff said. “Within the realm of domestic violence, so many of our clients experience financial abuse ... and that’s one of the reasons why they don’t leave that abusive relationship, is because their abuser holds finances over their head.”

Rainbow House, a domestic violence shelter serving Marinette and Oconto counties, was similarly left as one of the area’s only providers after Newcap closed. Executive Director Courtney Olson told Wisconsin Watch she’s received a “steady increase” in calls since then.

Like Safe Haven, Rainbow House cannot respond to general calls for housing. As it is, its waiting list for domestic violence clients continues to grow, which means ensuring their safety in other ways.

“In response to these long waits, we are working hard to keep survivors safe in their own homes whenever possible,” Olson wrote in an email. “That means offering more on the security side (cameras, cell phones, panic alarms, lock replacements, temporary restraining orders) and working with landlords to remove the person causing harm from a lease rather than displacing the survivor.”

A ‘long, slow road’

Regional Continuum of Care programs distribute federal funding for homeless shelters. Milwaukee, Dane and Racine counties have their own CoCs, while the Balance of State CoC oversees the rest of Wisconsin through regional coalitions.

Although based in Brown County, Newcap also served as the lead agency for the Wisconsin Balance of State’s Northeast Coalition in Florence, Continuum of Care programs nationwide for a greater portion of funding based on the Trump administration’s priorities. An estimated 1,287 people could lose their housing in Wisconsin, according to the National Alliance to End Homelessness.

The Balance of State is acting as a temporary lead for the Northeast and NWISH coalitions, ensuring the “point-in-time” homeless count happens — an essential step to securing federal funding — and filling vacant board positions.

Balance of State homeless systems manager Ryan Graham said they’re essentially starting from square one, and they won’t be able to replace Newcap easily.

“Now, it’s about, ‘How do we rebuild some kind of homeless response in that area?’ because the agency that pretty much did all of that and provided the capacity to do it is no longer there,” Graham said. “They were the coalition lead, they were the point-in-time lead, they were the state funding lead.”

Graham has been impressed by organizations like Safe Haven and SAM25 stepping up, but finding an organization qualified to take on Newcap’s responsibilities is still hard.

“It’s going to be a long, slow road,” Graham said. “Hopefully, it won’t be too slow, but we’re really starting from scratch in a lot of areas, especially in the Northeast and NWISH Coalition, as far as building a homeless response system.”

Flights are conducted according to federal regulations, and no aerobatic maneuvers will be performed.

The pilot will explain what your child will see and do. This may include explaining how airplanes work, looking at an aeronautical chart (or map) and describing the interior of the airplane, including the instrument panel. Safety is always a top priority when it comes to aviation. Listen and follow instructions given by that pilot, stay away from the propellers, and stay with the pilot or ground crew at all times. Do not enter the ramp area unescorted.

Young Eagles will spend about 15-20 minutes in the air.

Cookbook to share Menominee recipes, stories behind them

Grant helping CMN to bring together food knowledge

By LYNN ZAFFRANN
Correspondent

Imagine seeing your recipes, your mother's and even your grandmother's in print, along with stories about the recipes.

That is what a team from the College of the Menominee Nation is in the process of compiling. Working through a grant from the United States Department of Agriculture, Brian Kowalkowski, dean of continuing education, and Annette Tourtillott, job-based training specialist, are spearheading a project to collect recipes, and stories about the recipes, from members of the Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin.

The two-year task is titled Menominee Mecem Community Cookbook Project. "Mecem" is the Menominee word for food.

"In the last 15 years or so, we've seen this resurgence of local food production, food sovereignty, food access, where the community is really entrusted in finding out about growing your own food," said Kowalkowski. "We went through COVID and then we did see that there were issues with getting food into rural areas."

Some of the motivation for the project came from how the opportunity to grow one's own food leads into how to cook that food.

Tribal member Maggie Schlichting joined the project about five months ago. She is contributing recipes from her own collection, which includes some from her mother, Marlene Denny Sanapaw.

"I brought in recipes that my mom and I did together," Schlichting said. "One is a recipe for old-fashioned biscuits."

Tourtillott said that she knows there are many community members, like Schlichting, that have stories.

"It's just a matter of getting them to feel comfortable enough to sit down and share," she said. "I know that there are a lot of stories out there, and recipes. We just need to connect."

Schlichting will help to bring in people, such as her friends and other contacts in the community, who are well-known for their tasty and creative recipes.

Tourtillott said that Schlichting is the first community member that they've met with.

"There have been about five others that have brought in recipes so far," Tourtillott said. "I've just started compiling all of them now, typing them up."

She said that compiling recipes as they come in is the stage where the project is now.

According to Kowalkowski, the two-year project is just ending its first year.

They are working to get information about the cookbook out to the community and getting people to contribute recipes and stories and memories about the recipes.

The project is looking for "people who are willing to come in and sit in an interview with someone," Tourtillott said. Memories about traditional and family recipes passed down through the years will be the backbone of the cookbook.

In addition to submitting recipes and providing stories, contributors are invited to join demonstrations to teach younger members how to cook their recipes.

Tourtillott said that the college has a youth project coordinator, Tillie Peters, who brings youth in for the demonstrations.

The cooking demonstrations are planned to be held at the Shirley Daly Hall building on the campus and will be open to anyone who wants to attend.

"Every year we do a seed giveaway," Kowalkowski said.

He said that they set up information at the giveaway about the cookbook project as a way to advertise that they are seeking recipes.

Kowalkowski also said that information about the community cookbook project is also available at the Kehtekae-wak "They Eat Food" Farmers Market on campus every Friday through Oct. 1 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A large display about the cookbook project greets people coming in to the Community Technology Center on the college campus. Part of the display features photos and information about

The silent disease you may not feel

Have you ever been told by your dentist or dental hygienist that you have periodontal disease or that you need a deep cleaning?

Hearing those words can sound intimidating, and many patients immediately wonder if something is seriously wrong. The good news is that periodontal disease is very common, and when caught early, it is very treatable.

REBECCA STEVENS
GUEST COLUMNIST

Periodontal disease, often called gum disease, is an infection caused by bacteria that collect around the teeth and beneath the gumline. When plaque and tartar are not completely removed, the bacteria begin to irritate the gums.

Over time, this causes the gums to pull away from the teeth, creating spaces called periodontal pockets. As these pockets become deeper, more harmful bacteria can hide where your toothbrush and floss cannot reach. If left untreated, the infection can destroy the bone that supports your teeth, leading to loose teeth, painful infections and eventually tooth loss.

Have you ever been sitting in the dental chair while your hygienist calls out numbers like "2, 3, 2, 4, 5" and wondered what they mean?

Those numbers actually tell an important story about the health of your gums. They measure the depth of the pockets around each tooth. Healthy gums typically measure 1-3 millimeters. Measurements of 4 millimeters or greater may indicate areas where gum disease is present and where additional treatment may be needed.

These measurements allow your dental team to monitor your gum health over time, often identifying problems long before you notice symptoms yourself.

Not all periodontal disease is the same. Dentists classify it by both stage and grade. The stage describes how much damage has already occurred, while the grade estimates how quickly the disease is progressing.

Stage 1 is considered early gum disease with mild bone loss, while Stage 4 represents advanced disease with significant bone loss, loose teeth and difficulty chewing. Grades range from A to C, with Grade A progressing slowly and Grade C progressing more rapidly.

Factors such as smoking, uncontrolled diabetes, genetics, and certain medical conditions can increase the rate at which periodontal disease progresses.

Many patients become anxious when they hear they need a deep cleaning. In reality, it may be more helpful to think of it as gum infection therapy. A deep cleaning, also known as scaling and root planing, removes bacteria, hardened plaque and tartar from below the gumline where a regular cleaning simply cannot reach.

Thanks to modern dentistry, deep cleanings are much more comfortable than many people expect. Local anesthetic, gentle ultrasonic instruments and newer technologies help make the procedure a positive experience for most patients. The goal is not just to clean your teeth — it is to stop the infection, allow your gums to heal and help you keep foraging herbs that are culturally significant to food preparation, a significant part of the tribe's traditions.

An invitation to tribal elders, families and local cooks to share traditional recipes and memories, along with recipe submission forms, are available at the display.

"We don't want to leave anybody out," Kowalkowski said. "So, we want to make sure everybody has an opportunity to get their stories into the cookbook."

Anyone participating in the project can submit recipes and stories in writing, by spoken word or through an interview.

"I do have some recipes that were submitted for rabbit, turkey, venison, muskrat, squirrel," said Tourtillott.

She said that the recipes were given to the project by Doreen Reiter and were from her mother, Mabel Dickie. The recipes were in Dickie's handwriting.

"We have great cooks in the community," Tourtillott said.

"We went through COVID and then we did see that there were issues with getting food into rural areas."

BRIAN KOWALKOWSKI, College of Menominee dean of continuing education

"My son, Dustin Tourtillott, is one."

She said that her son hunts, fishes, gathers and cooks wild game in traditional ways.

Tourtillott said that her food memories of growing up on the Menominee Reservation include her mother baking bread, and their neighbor, Mary Fish, cooking.

"My dad would go deer hunting, fishing," she said. "I remember him cleaning the deer. Whatever he brought home from hunting or fishing, that was his responsibility to clean and cook. Everything had to be cooked slowly, nothing quick about it."

Tourtillott said that her father taught her son, Dustin, everything about the woods.

"My dad took a lot of kids under his wing to teach them about the reservation, some who didn't have a father figure," she said. "Now they are teaching their kids, going forward from generation to generation."

The college has a sustainable agriculture program. With the tribe's agriculture and food systems department and other community organizations working together, there is a concerted effort to help people eat healthier, learn how to grow their own food and to cook.

Publishing the cookbook will be an additional resource for the Menominee tribe's focus on helping its members eat healthier, according to Kowalkowski.

For information, or to share recipes and stories, contact Tourtillott at atourtillott@menominee.edu or 715-799-6226, ext. 3097.

your natural teeth for a lifetime.

What many people don't realize is that the health of your gums affects much more than your mouth.

Researchers continue to find strong connections between periodontal disease and overall health. Chronic inflammation associated with gum disease has been linked to an increased risk of heart disease, stroke, complications with diabetes, pregnancy complications, and cognitive decline, including dementia.

While periodontal disease does not directly cause these conditions, the bacteria and inflammation associated with gum disease may contribute to them or make existing medical conditions more difficult to manage.

One of the most surprising things about periodontal disease is that it is often called the "silent disease."

Many people have little to no pain until the disease has reached an advanced stage. Bleeding when brushing, persistent bad breath, swollen gums, gum recession or loose teeth are all signs that should not be ignored.

The best way to protect yourself is through regular dental visits, good brushing and flossing habits at home and early treatment when gum disease is detected. Taking care of your gums is not just about keeping your smile healthy – it is an investment in your overall health and quality of life.

If you've been told you have periodontal disease or need a deep cleaning, don't be afraid to ask questions.

Your dental team is there to help you understand your diagnosis and guide you through treatment. With today's techniques and technology, treating gum disease is more comfortable than ever, and taking action now can help you enjoy a healthier smile – and a healthier body – for years to come.

Dr. Rebecca Stevens, a general dentist and owner of Shawano Family Dentistry, received her training at Marquette University and is an active member of both the Wisconsin Dental Association and the American Dental Association, with a focus on evaluating the overall health of her patients.

Homemade goodies galore gleaned from fruit

For over 20 years I'd had a nice little doable raspberry patch on the farm. It was ever-bearing and in turn, produced raspberries early summer and again in the fall, until a heavy frost put them to sleep for the winter.

Every year, the latter harvest was more abundant than the first. I'd have to pick every other day just to keep up. The bees and I shared the patch. There were more than enough for all of us, I'd remind them occasionally.

This year, I was sorely disappointed in my little patch. After the first green shoots were spotted, I'd cut back stalks like I do every year, and clean up dead sticks and dig out nasty thistles trying to run the roost – just general housekeeping.

For some reason, my raspberries decided to simply not participate. We surmised I might have been too boisterous or perhaps I got at it too early in the season, or uncooperative weather. For reasons unknown, they went nowhere. We have no fledgling berries – nary a one.

I was disappointed, but my husband was despondent.

"What about my vudkas?" he bemoaned.

Vudka is an easy desert I make that requires two cups of fresh or frozen raspberries. It's a staple at our house, believe me.

Strawberry shortcake, made with Kay's mother-in-law's recipe, will be enjoyed during the winter months at the Reminger farm kitchen, thanks to the efforts of her husband.

FARM LIFE FROM A FARM WIFE

KAY REMINGER
COLUMNIST

About then, a long-time acquaintance advertised she had raspberries for sale, $7 per quart, just picked and ready to go. Immediately, my husband contacted her, inquiring if we could buy three quarts. They live close by.

"Come on over," she responded. Getting there, she pushed my money away and handed over our berries. Last year, my husband had moved some dirt around for them with our skidder at their newly-built house and had refused payment.

"We're old friends and now neighbors. I don't need anything," he'd told them at the time.

People are thoughtful. They remembered my husband's kindness and returned the favor.

Needless to say, he was ecstatic. He'd get his vudkas – with or without our raspberries.

In June, he resolutely went picking strawberries at Glendale Farms in Clintonville, bringing two flats of delicious, sweet red strawberries home. This assures he'll have strawberry shortcake – made with his dear late mother's recipe – all winter long.

"I'll pick if you bake me shortcakes," says he.

Deal.

Mid-July on a hot scorcher of a day, we took advantage of a very short cherry-picking season, finding ourselves on the road to Door County bright and early. We were heading for our favorite place to pick cherries, Meledy Cherry Farm, 15 minutes southwest of Sturgeon Bay. It's a beautiful orchard. We go every year.

Why every year, you may ask?

Because my husband needs his fix of cherry pies.

Getting there right at 9 a.m., we beat the heat of the day and in less than one-half hour had picked two full pails of beautiful, tart cherries. At the check-out counter, I had inquired of the owner how do they keep birds away from making mincemeat of the fruit?

| 3 egg yolks | 1 cup sugar |
| 5 tablespoons milk | 1 cup flour |
| 1 teaspoon baking powder | |

Grease a 9X13 pan. Mix ingredients by hand until well-blended. Fold in three egg whites, beaten stiff. Bake for 20-25 minutes in a pre-heated 350-degree oven. Serve with sweetened pureed strawberries and ice cream.

| Filling: | |
| 2 cups cherries | ½ cup water |
| 2 tablespoons lemon juice | ¾ cup sugar |
| 4 tablespoons cornstarch | |
| Crumb crust: | |
| 1½ cups flour | ½ cup sugar |
| ½ cup butter | |

Add filling ingredients together. Bring to a boil, cooking 10 minutes. Stir frequently. Mix together crumb crust ingredients until crumbly. Firmly pat crumb crust in a pie plate, saving a little for the topping. Bake 45 minutes in a pre-heated 350-degree oven. Serve warm with ice cream.

| 2 cups fresh or frozen raspberries | 2 cups flour |
| 2 cups milk | 2 eggs |
| 1 cup sugar | |

Grease a 9x13 pan. Mix flour, milk and eggs, much like pancake batter consistency. Pour into prepared pan. Add raspberries. Sprinkle sugar on top. Bake 45 minutes in a pre-heated 350 degree oven. Serve warm.

"We run distress calls, which ward off the birds and then shut the speakers off before our guests arrive," was the answer.

What a wonderful, natural way to take care of potential devastating losses. The cherries hang so low and lush that one need only to pick eye-level. No stretching required. They have a station next door and for an extra $5 per pail they offer washing and pitting. Totally worth it.

Raspberries, strawberries and cherries are frozen in freezer bags in two-cup portions. We do share with our boys as they both make fruit smoothies, but for the most part, my husband is the one that reaps the rewards of our labor.

("Then God said, 'I will give you every seed-bearing plant on the face of the whole earth and every tree that has fruit with seed in it. They will be yours for food.'" Genesis 1:29, New International Version)

Federal grant helps Clintonville archery club

Jim Schoenike didn't think he had much chance to secure a nearly $90,000 federal grant to help his small bow club expand its outdoor range and facilities, but hoped he might get a few thousand.

Using his background in the financial industry, he filled out a detailed application that included estimated costs to expand and enhance the range and submitted it in July 2024.

The expected rejection letter came a few months after he applied for the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act funds distributed through the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

About five months later, Schoenike, president of the Clintonville Bow Hunters Club, got a call from the program's DNR administrator. Another club selected had turned down a grant.

"We are able to fund your entire project request," said Sarah Brenner, DNR grant program director.

Schoenike, whose grandfather decades ago had donated the 40 acres that the bow club sits on, couldn't believe his ears. He thought someone was playing a joke on him.

Since then, the club northwest of Clintonville — founded in 1941 and the oldest local archery club in Wisconsin — has been buzzing with activity. Treasurer Mike Bevernitz built 28 new field target frames, bow holders were installed, concrete sidewalks have been poured and soon the club will be open for public use.

The grant will bring new amenities for the existing 35 club members to enjoy but also help attract new members to the range and the sports of archery and bowhunting.

Brenner explained the shooting range grant process, which typically has a July 15 annual application deadline (the deadline was extended to Aug. 15 this year). The grants, typically $600,000 to $800,000 per year, are awarded to 10 to 15 clubs annually, with about double that number applying, she said. The amount awarded per grant is $5,000 to $100,000 and the grants must be used within two years.

Each state is allocated a portion of the federal Pittman-Robertson Act grant money collected from an 11% excise tax on firearms, ammunition and archery equipment. The allocations are based in part on the number of hunting licenses sold per state, Brenner noted.

Checking out a new practice target frame are, from left, Shadows board member Megan Bouchette, Secretary Brittany Bouchette, chapter Chairman and Treasurer Dan Bouchette and CBH President Jim Schoenike. ROSS BIELEMA

The club must first talk to Brenner or Brett Johananen, who oversees the state's 11 public shooting ranges, before completing an application. A detailed budget of the project costs and plans is required. The grants reimburse clubs after the expenses are incurred. Club workers and volunteers are reimbursed $17 an hour for their work on the projects.

Clubs must come up with 25% of the grant total on their own (including donations, volunteer work and other funding), with the federal money paying the remaining 75%.

Clubs can also get reimbursed for future expenses such as target replacements and maintenance, if those items are included in the proposal, Brenner said.

CBH is close to raising its share, with a $7,500 grant from the Clintonville Chapter of Shadows on the Wolf and a $5,000 donation from Schoenike leading the way. More than 120 hours of labor and donations from club members and area businesses also helped.

Clubs are allowed to collect reasonable membership fees from those using the improved ranges, including a one-day membership fee, Brenner said.

CBH charges $40 a year for a single membership or $50 for a family membership. Members also can pay a land-use fee to hunt on the clubhouse site's 40 acres and an additional 312 acres in Shawano County near the Navarino State Wildlife Area. Social members pay $25 a year and have no voting rights or use of the hunting properties.

Social members can use the practice and field ranges 120 days a year.

"You've got to make it accessible and workable," Schoenike said.

Grant applications are rated on a variety of criteria, including how many public hunting and shooting recruitment and retention programs they offer annually, days they are open to the public (the minimum is 75 per year) and whether they have done lead abatement (firearms ranges).

Area bowhunters and target archers will have a chance to see the revamped CBH club grounds and shoot a round of 3D archery featuring a variety of foam animal targets Aug.

15-16 the club, N11517 Boy Scout Lane, Clintonville. Shooting hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 15 and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 16. The cost is $10 for adults, $2 for children younger than 12, which includes a free hot dog and soda for children. Food, soft drinks and beer are available. Everyone is welcome, and no additional membership fee is required.

For more information about the club, contact Schoenike at cbh.archeryclub@gmail.com or check out the club Facebook page.

Anyone can lay down the law on open records

I am not a lawyer. I am a Madison resident who is curious about how the city spends money and whether it follows its own rules.

A few years ago, I started writing a blog about Madison city government, focusing on things the mainstream media were not covering. A big part of this involves obtaining records under phone number and Social Security number. Neither one covers a work email address or a work phone number. You do not need a law degree to read them and see that an official's city email is not a home address.

And so I pushed back. I wrote to assistant city attorney Adriana Peguero, whose job includes records compliance. I laid out my request, listed the specific redactions, quoted the two provisions and explained why neither applied. Putting a request for compliance in writing is important, because it puts all the facts and the rationale in front of the higher authority.

A couple of weeks later, Peguero replied. "I have discussed this matter with the MPD records custodians, and they will be working on a new records set for you that discloses these email addresses and phone numbers," she wrote. I received the unredacted records the same day.

Note what it says: all persons. Not just credentialed journalists or licensed lawyers.

Earlier this year, I asked the Madison Police Department for emails regarding a plan to let the department accept training grants without Common Council approval, a special exception unique to that department and apparently contrary to city policy.

I was reporting on the proposal. The records arrived in May. They were useful, but the department had blacked out the work email addresses and work phone numbers of several government employees and a contractor doing business with the city.

That looked wrong to me. The open records law has only two provisions that allow a custodian to withhold contact information: Sections 19.36(10) and 19.36(11). You can read both on the Wisconsin Legislature's website. They cover only four things: a person's home address, home email address, home

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SAVE Act should be stopped, sinks citizens

To the editor:

The National Urban League has denounced the proposed Safeguard American Voter Eligibility (SAVE) Act an extremist effort to dismantle democracy and disenfranchise millions of American citizens.

"Not satisfied with giving up Congress' power to be a check on the president, House Republicans have attempted to undermine the foundation of our democracy, our fundamental right to vote," National Urban League President and CEO Marc Morial said. "Under the guise of combating so called voter fraud – a problem that does not exist – the SAVE Act will make it harder for millions of American citizens to vote."

The SAVE Act requires

all voters to show documentary proof of citizenship, like a birth certificate or passport, any time they register to vote or make changes to their voter registration. More than 21 million eligible voters do not have these documents readily available, including two-thirds of Black Americans who do not have a valid passport and 69 million women and 4 million men who do not have birth certificates that match their name.

I urge all members of Congress to vote against this transparent effort to silence the voices of the people. Contact our congressional representatives and implore them to defend democracy and protect voting rights. We in Shawano County – all citizens everywhere – deserve the right to vote and not have these suppressions imposed on us.

Mary Arnold, Shawano

How Trump can end free-riding on American innovation

The developed world has long forced American patients to disproportionately shoulder the cost of pharmaceutical innovation. President Donald Trump has had enough. He recently put our allies on notice – by launching a formal trade investigation into Germany's unfair drug pricing practices and signaling his readiness to formally investigate other nations if they refuse to change course.

Those investigations are desperately needed. Germany's government is poised to enact an even more aggressive price-setting scheme in the coming weeks, and Japan's leaders are considering similar steps.

The official probe into Germany's drug pricing practices will give Trump administration officials the leverage needed to bring Germany to the negotiating table and compel an end to its freeloading. The administration should now follow suit in Japan.

Nearly every wealthy U.S. trading partner – including the United Kingdom, France and South Korea – uses government price controls to suppress payments for innovative U.S. medicines. Germany and Japan are among the worst offenders.

These policies shift the cost of pharmaceutical research and development onto Americans. Indeed, biopharmaceutical companies earn roughly three-quarters of their global profits in the United States, even though the U.S. represents only one-quarter of the world economy.

Fortunately, President Trump recognizes the imbalance and has already shown how trade policy can help correct it.

His administration recently struck a landmark deal with the United Kingdom. In exchange for avoiding threatened tariffs, the UK agreed to double its drug spending over the next decade and reduce the amount of revenue it claws back from companies through rebate mechanisms.

That agreement was a real victory for Americans. It committed a wealthy ally to paying a fairer share of global pharmaceutical R&D costs, reducing the burden that has long fallen on the United States. It also strengthened incentives for domestic research and manufacturing.

But there is still considerable ground left to cover with America's trading partners. Germany and Japan, especially, appear determined to double down on their current policies.

Both governments appear to be betting that the United States is unwilling to impose meaningful trade consequences for discriminatory pricing practices. The Trump administration already proved Germany wrong and should do so in Japan. A Section 301 investigation is the right tool.

Launching these probes allows U.S. officials to formally examine how our allies use price controls to systematically devalue American medicines and build a record supporting corrective action.

If the investigation concludes that these governments have engaged in unfair or discriminatory practices against U.S. companies, the administration could impose retaliatory measures, including tariffs and other penalties. That outcome is avoidable if Germany and Japan agree to meaningful reforms instead.

Americans have footed the bill for the pharmaceutical innovation the world depends on for far too long. Washington should use every available trade tool to bring allies like Germany and Japan to the table and finally end their free-riding.

He graduated from Sacred Heart Catholic grade school and Shawano High School in 1963. Bill then attended UW-Oshkosh, majoring in mechanical engineering. He returned to Shawano where he operated Radtke Excavating Inc. until 1982, when he joined the family electrical business, serving as it's owner/operator until his retirement in 2013.

During those years, Bill was always active in Shawano community life, serving on the Shawano City Council, Shawano County Board, the chamber of commerce, as a sheriff's deputy and volunteer fireman.

With his first wife Ann, he raised his four children. In his retirement, he met his second wife, Pat and expanded his family to include new children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Having a full house for family gatherings was one of Bill's greatest joys. He had a wonderful sense of adventure - both for himself and those around him. He always was ready to help make every project and plan bigger and better however he could. Bill loved to fly and volunteered many hours as a pilot for medical transport, a highlight of which included being one of the few planes in the sky after 9/11 to bring personnel to NYC.

BETTY ELLIOTT

Betty Elliott, 98, a lifelong resident of Elderon, passed away peacefully Tuesday, July 28, 2026, at Homme Home of Wittenberg. Betty was born Oct. 8, 1927, to Oliver and Maria (Yarish) Gilbertson.

On April 20, 1946, Betty married Arthur "Art" Elliott. Together they built a wonderful life in Elderon, where they lovingly raised their two sons, Ronald and Robert. Along the way, they owned and operated several local taverns, becoming familiar faces to generations of friends, neighbors and visitors.

Betty was never one to sit still. Whether she was picking potatoes for Gunderson Farms, preparing meals for children at Elderon Elementary School or cooking at The Wolff's Den, she poured her heart into everything she did. She worked hard, loved deeply and found joy in caring for others.

A remarkably talented seamstress, Betty designed and created countless wedding gowns, bridesmaid dresses, prom dresses and other formal wear for family, friends and neighbors throughout the years. Her craftsmanship and attention to detail became her signature, and generations of brides walked down the aisle wearing dresses made by Betty's skilled hands. Long after the celebrations ended, her creations remained treasured keepsakes, a lasting reminder of the love she stitched into every piece.

Faith, family and community were at the heart of Betty's life. She was an active member of the Elderon Memorial VFW Auxiliary, where she proudly served as both president and secretary. She also served as president of the Our Savior Lutheran Church Ladies Aid and was an active member of the Elderon Cemetery Club and the Elderon Improvement Club. Betty believed in giving back and was always ready to lend a helping hand wherever she was needed.

Those who knew Betty knew there was never a dull moment. She always had a story to tell, loved visiting with family and friends, and was happiest when surrounded by the people she loved. Her warmth, humor, hard-working spirit and generous heart touched everyone who knew her.

Betty was preceded in death by her beloved husband, Art; her son, Ronald "Ronnie" Elliott; her brothers, Bob and Gaylen; her sister, Ruth; and her son-in-law Danny.

GERALD 'JERRY' YOUNG

Gerald "Jerry" Young, 87, of Shawano passed away Wednesday, July 29, 2026, at his home. Jerry was born May 14, 1939, in Outagamie to the late Bernard and Angarose (Lyons) Young.

He attended Shiocton High School before entering the United States Army where he served his country proudly from 1956-58. On Sept. 9, 1961, Jerry was united in marriage to the love of his life, Linda Kamke, at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Stephenville.

He worked in construction before owning and operating Young's Tap in Hortonville from 1964-69, then opening Jerry's Country Sound in Shawano from 1970-95 before finishing his career as a bartender at the Menominee Casino. He retired at the age of 70.

Jerry was active in the tavern league and loved watching sports, especially the Packers and Brewers. He was witty, social, loved his work but most of all loved and adored his wife. Jerry taught his children how to properly treat a woman by the way he loved Linda.

Jerry is survived by his sons, Jack (Jessica) Young longtime friend, Christina, who remained faithfully by her side until the very end.

Betty's legacy is woven through the lives of the people she loved, the community she faithfully served and the beautiful garments she created with such care. She will be remembered for her kindness, her tireless work ethic, her gift for storytelling and her ability to make everyone feel welcome.

As we say goodbye, we can't help but picture Betty pushing open the door to Art and Betty's one more time. Art looks up from behind the bar with that familiar smile. Ronnie and her brother, Bob, are already settled onto their favorite stools. Without saying a word, Art slides her beer across the bar, just the way she liked it. At last, they're all together again.

The family extends their heartfelt gratitude to the dedicated staff at The Homme Home of Wittenberg and St. Croix Hospice, especially Jenny, for the extraordinary care, compassion and support they provided to Betty and her family.

Family and friends are invited to celebrate Betty's life Friday, Aug. 7, with visitation from 9-11 a.m. at Schmidt and Schulta Funeral Home in Wittenberg. A funeral service will follow at 11 a.m., with a luncheon immediately afterward at the Wittenberg Community Center.

A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at Evergreen Rest Cemetery in Elderon. Following the burial, family and friends are invited to gather at MaMa's Tavern to share a meal, a few drinks and memories of Betty, just as she would have wanted.

Memories and messages of support may be shared at www.schmidtschulta.com.

GREG MELLIS | NEW MEDIA

State newspaper group changes name

After 173 years of serving Wisconsin's newspaper industry, the Wisconsin Newspaper Association is adopting a new name: the Wisconsin NewsMedia Association.

The new name reflects the evolution of how Wisconsin news organizations deliver trusted local journalism to their communities. The name change honors the association's long and distinguished history while recognizing the realities of modern news consumption.

While newspapers remain a cornerstone of local news, member organizations today publish content across multiple platforms, including websites, mobile applications, e-newsletters, podcasts, social media channels, streaming services and digital subscription products.

The transition to the Wisconsin NewsMedia Association acknowledges that today's news consumers expect information to be available whenever and wherever they choose to access it.

"Local journalism has never been more important, and the way we deliver that journalism has expanded far beyond the printed newspaper," said Greg Mellis, president of the WNA board of directors and publisher of the Shawano Leader, Oconto County Times Herald, and Wittenberg Enterprise and Birnamwood News. "Our new name better reflects who we are today and where our industry is headed. We remain deeply committed to newspapers while embracing all of the platforms our members use to inform, engage and serve Wisconsin communities."

All affected by April storms can apply for SBA disaster assistance loans

Gov. Tony Evers is encouraging small businesses and nonprofits affected by severe weather that occurred across the state in April to apply for federal disaster loans through the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Earlier in July, the state was notified that SBA approved Evers' request for a Rapid Disaster

Declaration, which enables Wisconsin businesses, private nonprofits and residents affected by April's severe storms, tornadoes and floods to apply for low-interest disaster loans.

The disaster loan offerings through the SBA are complementary to and separate from programs offered through FEMA.

Among those eligible for the funds are small businesses and private nonprofit organizations in Oconto and Shawano counties.

SBA customer service representatives will be on hand at the Business Recovery Centers in Marathon, Milwaukee, and Outagamie counties to answer questions and assist with the disaster loan application process. Walk-ins are welcome, and you can schedule in-person appointments in advance at appointment.sba.gov.

The hours of operation are listed below:

Marathon County: Business Recovery Center, Marathon County Public Library, 300 N. First St., Wausau, WI 54403. Open

9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Milwaukee County: Business Recovery Center, SBA District Office, 310 W. Wisconsin Ave., Ste. 580W, Milwaukee, WI 53203. Open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Outagamie County: Business Recovery Center, Shiocton-Bovina Fire Department, W7746 Pine St.,

Shiocton, WI 54170. Open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

To apply online, visit sba.gov/disaster.

The filing deadline to return applications for physical property damage is Aug. 31. The deadline to return economic injury applications is March 30, 2027.

school that are falling between 28 and 30 students per section. So what determines that fourth grade, at 26 students per section, the need for an additional teacher?" McKinnies said. "I'm concerned as to why we're picking one grade to not hold to those ratios when we issued non-renewals and made such a big deal that we need to stick to ratios."

McKinnies said she believes that behavioral issues for students going from Olga Brener into Shawano Community Middle School have increased and that she's baffled that an additional teaching position for sixth grade is not being considered.

"If we've found it in our budget to add a teacher, I would like to see," she said.

"If we're not staffing to ratios, I would like to hear from the middle school if they needed that and where the need would be greater."

According to district information, about 42% of the students going into fourth grade are on an individual reading plan, and 61% are reading below grade level. In math, 76% are below grade level.

Board member Bobbi Lemerond said she wants to see the student-to-teacher ratios for all grade levels so the board can determine where there's a need for more teachers.

"Where are we sitting coming into this school year?" Lemerond said. "What is our current staff ratio for every grade, especially from 4-12, since those are the ones with the highest class sizes?"

Renard said setting up the approval for the additional teacher in the consent agenda puts him and the rest of the board in a "bad spot."

"I don't like what happened here," Renard said. "I would rather we be more transparent and say, 'Hey, we see the need for this. This is what we think. Do you support it?' If the answer is yes, then you go and approve. You don't approve first. It's backwards right now, and that's not right."
